Human Toxicological Evaluation

According to the legal obligations of § 30 LFGB (German Code on Foodstuff, Consumer Articles and Feedstuff) and based upon the qualitative and quantitative recipe and the human toxicological properties of the used ingredients (raw materials), and taking into consideration relevant exposure scenarios for consumers

„AKEMI Natural Stone Intensive Cleaner“

has to be regarded as

for its intended use to clean surfaces which may have contact with foodstuff.

This evaluation is based upon the following:

1. Toxicological evaluation of all ingredients (raw materials) with respect to their potency and their concentration in the evaluated recipe.
2. Toxicological evaluation of the final product considering the product formula (recipe) in comparison to the practice of use and any safety considerations to be derived thereof.
3. Toxicological evaluation of the intended and reasonably foreseeable use conditions taking into account the respective exposure scenarios for consumers.
4. Any additional items like relevant information for safe use and warning phrases derived thereof.

This evaluation was performed by taking into account all relevant documents, with further consideration of specific national and/or international recommendations together with expert experience and state of the art toxicological knowledge.
